ST. THOMAS UNIVERSITY
School of THEOLOGY & MINISTRY

Friday, March 28, 2014
St. Anthony Chapel
St. Thomas University
7:30pm

Dr. Kathy Maxwell

Dr. Kathy Maxwell (B.A. Hardin-Simmons University; M.Div. Logsdon Seminary; Ph.D. Baylor University) currently serves as Associate Professor of Biblical Studies and chairs the Biblical and Theological Studies department in the School of Ministry at Palm Beach Atlantic University. Her areas of research interest include New Testament studies, especially literary and rhetorical methodologies; biblical interpretation; and the history of the Christian church. Dr. Maxwell has written Hearing Between the Lines: The Audience as Fellow-Worker in Luke-Acts and its Literary Milieu (T & T Clark, 2010). Dr. Maxwell has published and presented on topics such as characterization in the gospels, rhetorical features of ancient narrative, performance criticism, and the role of the audience in ancient narratives. Prior to coming to PBA, she served as the director of undergraduate academic programs at the South Texas School of Christian Studies in Corpus Christi, Texas, and lectured at Howard Payne University and Logsdon Seminary. She is married to Dr. Nathan Maxwell, who teaches Old Testament and Hebrew in PBA's School of Ministry.

2013-2014 Contemporary Biblical Scholars Series

Christ and Genesis: Reading the Gospel from the Beginning

Dr. Nathan Maxwell

Dr. Nathan Maxwell (B.A. Hardin-Simmons University; M.Div. Logsdon Seminary; Ph.D. Baylor University) is currently Assistant Professor of Biblical Studies at Palm Beach Atlantic University. His areas of research interest include literary and canonical methods of Old Testament interpretation, particularly with regard to Old Testament poetry. He is focused on the role of poetic voice within the Hebrew Psalter. Before coming to PBA, Dr. Maxwell served for three years as instructor of biblical studies and director of technology at the South Texas School of Christian Studies, a collaborative extension campus for Howard-Payne University and Logsdon Seminary. In addition to his academic interests, Dr. Maxwell has served as an instructional design assistant in PBA's Office of Online Learning, collaborating with other faculty to develop online courses for the university. He is from Chugiak, Alaska, and has been married since 1997 to his wife, Dr. Kathy Maxwell, who teaches New Testament and church history in PBA's School of Ministry. Nathan and Kathy have attended or worked at the same school since junior high. They currently attend First Baptist Church in West Palm Beach.