CLASS SIZE OVERRIDE INSTRUCTIONS:

Once the regular registration process is complete, students who want to register for a class that is "full" will need to complete this course override form. We will not begin to review the forms until the Monday following the initial registration period, so there is no need to rush to get the form in first. Please do not request an override from the Professor teaching thee/a ss. He/she will be consulted by the Administration if the override is otherwise feasible. We will advise you of the status of your request as soon as possible. They will be granted on the basis of need and ability to satisfy the request, not on the basis of first come-first served. On the override form, you will need to provide the course(s) you want to take that you were unable to acquire because they were full at the time of your registration. You also need to provide what courses you would need to drop if you did acquire the new course(s), and an explanation of why you need the particular course(s) for which you were unable to register.

Please keep the following in mind:

- You should not rely on an override to acquire a class. So if you can register for another (less convenient) section of a class, you should do so.
- Some course enrollments cannot be enlarged due to the fact that the class is already at the capacity of the room or the class is taught in a format where the professor needs a distinct number of students (e.g., 8 teams of 2 students).
- Unless you were given special authorization, all students must register for at least 12 credits. If you do not register for at least 12 credits, your financial aid may be delayed. No student can register for more than 18 credits (note that credits for Moot Court, Mock Trial, and Independent Research count in the 18 credit limitation) in any fall or spring semester.
- J.D. students can take the LL.M. courses in Intercultural Human Rights as elective courses. Some of these courses may be of particular interest because of the topic and some may make for a more convenient schedule. To register for one of the LL.M. courses, J.D. students need to do so manually with a Drop/Add form and provide it to the Registrar. Note that if the LL.M. course conflicts with one class session of another class you can still take the LL.M. course but you would have to be willing to take the "absence" in the other class.
